

BUGATTI WORKING FROM HOME — BUGATTI PRESIDENT STEPHAN WINKELMANN

How the Bugatti boss is still leading the company in spite of the lockdown.

Bugatti has suspended production of its vehicles such as the Chiron¹ and Divo² in Molsheim. Nevertheless, a large number of employees are still working — from home and in compliance with the recommendations of the corresponding authorities, international experts and government measures.

“For me, the only benefit of the lockdown is that I have more time to read in the evenings. I normally read two books in parallel, one fiction and one non-fiction. However, I am reading two non-fiction books at the moment — a biography of Charles de Gaulle and a book about the French paratrooper units during the Indochina war. There is also a book about the ‘Bugatti Queen’ on my shelf, which tells the story of the French female racing driver Hellé Nice, who drove a Bugatti Type 35 C. This book is next on my list.”
